Rules or No Rules?

It is evident from the proceedings of the House of Representatives at Washing ton on Tuesday last that the Demo crats are not free to vote uncon-ditionally against the code of rules which the Republican majority of the Committee on Rules are expected very soon to re port. The Democrats have to choose b tween the arbitrary, uncontrollable rulings of Speaker REED, as exemplified by him of Tuesday last, on the one hand and on the other a code of rules which may be bad, but which could hardly be more ob ectionable than the alternative of leaving it to such a Speaker to carry out his own sweet will. To a member who raised a point of order last week the Speaker said: "The Chair does not think so, and the Clerk will proceed to call the roll." These are almost the exact word he used. He summarily dismissed the point of order as of no value whatever. If Mr. Reen has already the hardthood thus snub the Democrats and to proceed a If no point of order had been raised, and to decide that there is no rule or law which compels him to appoint tellers upon proper request, then there is no telling what he will do or won't do when it i settled, if it is ever settled, that he is to

The question, therefore, which the Demo crats of the House of Representatives will be compelled to decide first of all will be as we have said, whether REED without rules to govern his conduct would not be worse than REED with bad rules to govern his conduct. It has been said of the laws of the land that it is more important that the people governed by them should know what the laws are than that the laws themselves should be exceptionally good. The same remark might possibly be made as to the House of Representatives. It may be that it would be better for the members to know what the rules are, even if objection able, than to trust to Speaker Rego to make rules as the occasion for them arises. We have no guarantee that he would even be consistent in his rulings. He might decide every point in favor of the Republicans out regard to previous rulings. He might refuse to allow appeals from his de cisions. He might even claim the right to decide by an inspection of the Housthether a quorum was present or not; and then if in addition to that ruling he should refuse to entertain an appeal the Demo crats would be so environed as that even a RANDALL would not be able to extricate it. them from their helpless and hopeless con-on the appeal above mentioned. Why not? Where were the other twenty-five Democrats? If fourteen of the missing ones had been present the Speaker's decision could have been overruled. When it requires a two-thirds vote to pass a resolution or bill in either house of Congress the pairing of one member with only one is not considered fair. There ought to be two to one in order that the pairing may be fair. So in the case under consideration. The Republicans ought to be made to furnish their own quoram; because if the Democrats refuse to vote, and make the point of order that there was no quorum voting, they will need the support of only one fifth of the members present to entitle them to demand the yeas and nays. In other words to Pass any resolution or bill or adopt any motion, whereas the Democrats need only one fifth of the members present to entitle them to demand the yeas and nays. JANCARY 22, 1890.

The City Council held its regular months was ingular to the sold in setting last night. Besides the usual routine work the following business was transacted: Permission was given the Chesapeake and Ohio Railway Company to build a reception-room for the accommodation of the public on the site of the old building which was burned last year. The countract for this building has been awarded to a firm of contractors in this city and work on the same will begin in the near future. This reception-room is very necessary for the accommodation of the travelling public, and the above road should see in that it is to their interest to have a suitable building erected on the site of the former one. pressed his willingness to have the bill recommended as suggessed by Mr. Teller, and his belief that that would be the best disposition of it. The committee would then undertake to perfect the bill and would report it back at an early day. The question of recommittal was taken by yeas and nays. The first vote resulted yeas 22, nays 14. As there was no quorum present there was a call of the Senate, which showed fifty-three senators present. Some of them paired, however. Then Mr. Hale proposed that the vote be taken by a division, but Mr. Vest, who opposed a recommittal and wished the bill passed as it is, objected. The second vote resulted yeas 28, nays 20, accompanied by a transfer of pairs, and the bill was recommitted to the Census Committee.

The Senate then took up the calendar. The Blair deduned its reading in fall; and the Secretary proceeded to read it. At the close of the reading Mr. Haris suggested that as the bill was now properly before the Senate and had to become "unfinished business" (unless other arrangements were made by consent) the Senator from New Hampshire should fix a day in the future when it would become a special order and remain before the Senate and had to become "unfinished business" (unless other arrangements were made by consent) the Senator from New Hampshire should fix a day in the future when it would become a special order and remain before the Senate from the provided of the position which the bill now had. my duty. I am only stating facts. That is my privilege. If known to the committees having this subject in charge they are useless. If not known they are highly important. I do not well see how they can be known. I do not see how they could in a short session become familiar with them. If has cost me the diligent study of more than a year to know a little about the subject. And that little tells me that no wise law can be framed by any one who does not on the spot study the laws and methods of the States I have named. The competing propositions and the opposing methods are there, and the actual experience and results of these propositions and methods are there, if the State wants revenue she will be compelled to frame a law essentially different from any she has ever enacted or proposed.

The oyster-planters and farmers may be satisfied with the law as it is. The revenue they pay may be an equivalent for the risk they run. But the policy of other States is greater security of title and of property in exchange for greater revenue to the State.

As will be seen the book is 189 years old and has been in use 175 years. It is still in a good state of preservation. In measuring it was found to be 17 inches in length, 11 broad, and 35 thick. It is covered with blue plush, and had two beautiful silvered clasps, which are off at present.

This Bible has been handed down by Mrs. Griffitts's ancestors for nearly two hundred years, and contains much interesting information concerning the family relations.

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill that was discussed yesterday to require the Superintendent of the Cansus it to ascertain what percentage of people own their farms; the number of farms under mortgage and the amount thereof. The discussion was kept up for nearly two bours, going largely over the questions of steamship subsidies. It was participated in by Mesars.
